Background:

Nizamabad District is in the slot of agricultural districts in the State of Andhra Pradesh. Though the district is situated away from the sea, the climate is tropical. The annual rainfall in the district is around 1000 MM. The same is very intensive during the period June to September. Normal minimum temperature is 13.7 C and maximum is 39.9 Centigrade. At times the temperature falls as low as 6 Centigrade in December-January and touches as high as 47 Centigrade in May.

The soils of the district are primarily of two kinds, Black cotton and Sandy loams. The Black cotton soils are in Bodhan Revenue Division. Sandy loams cover other parts of the district. The ratio of Black Cotton and Sandy loams is 55: 45 respectively.

The district's inventory of minerals is poor. Clay of superiority quality fit for manufacturing high quality bricks and tiles is abundantly available in the district. There is a find of quartz in Nandipet Mandal in Nizamabad Revenue Division. Attempts for its exploitation have not been that serious. Iron ore and granites are occurring in the district and their utility is yet to pick up.

The Forest cover in the district is around 21% of its total geographical area; mostly the coverage is on the hilly terrain. Teak is abundant; there are scanty reserves of Bamboo. The minor produce from the Forests is Kendu leaves used in Beedi making Industry in the district.

Manjira and Godavari are the two major rivers flowing through this district. The two major river valley projects one Nizamsagar at the South Western end and the other Sri Ramsagar in the north east has virtually stabilized agriculture. The under ground water potential in plain areas of the district, is also substantial.

Relevance of the aforesaid situation obtaining in the district for durable industrial plan is the current study. In this the role of contributing sectors, for the raw material base i.e., mines, forests, agriculture and animal husbandry practices needs assessment. On close examination it can be perceived that the weak material resource base in mineral sector in Nizamabad district stands compensated by the forest and agriculture sectors. This is a point in favour of contemplating industrial plans basing on renewable resources. Coming to renewable resources the woods once felled take long spells about 20 years to regenerate hence that which comes from forests is not assured and also requires very cautious approach as indiscriminate felling of forests is disastrous. Therefore the only alternative is to exploit agriculture sector, which is poised to provide renewable raw material for manufacturing industry not only in substantial quantities but also of wide variety.
